

A FRIEND FOREVER

AINDRILA MITRA

Translation
NEERA JAIN

Illustrations
PRONABESH MAITY

Nehru Bal Pustakalaya

A Friend Forever

Aindrila Mitra

Translation
Neera Jain

Illustrations
Pronabesh Maity

NATIONAL BOOK TRUST, INDIA

A Friend Forever

This is the story of a lonely Tree.

In the middle of a vast field, our Tree has a home.

There are no other trees in that field.
No birds come here.

That is why the Tree of our story is very lonely.

In his heart, the Tree holds a sea of stories. But whom to tell!!

The Stars. The Moon. The Sun.
Everyone is far away.

At a great distance, in the sky....

Suddenly one day, a little blue bird comes and sits on the Tree. She had lost her way.

After a while, darkness fell. How would she go home now? So she decides to stay back for the night.

That night, the Tree and the blue bird become friends. They talk to each other for long. The entire night.

At the break of dawn, the bird has to leave.

She tells the Tree, "Don't feel sad, dear friend, I will come again."
So saying, she flies away.

The Tree keeps waiting. Days pass by, so do the nights. The blue bird does not come.

Tears well up in his eyes and roll down drop by drop.

Nobody knows how many days pass by.

One morning, the Tree finds, "Lo!
There is a pond of tears around him!"

Now, the Tree starts talking to this pond. He talks for the whole day long. But can the sea of stories finish in a day!!

Sinking his feet in the pond, the Tree continues to talk. He talks and looks at the reflection of the branch in the pond, on which a bird once came and sat.

Our Tree is not lonely any more.

